

Acceptance of goods

Acceptance of goods

Goods and movable property can only be accepted, without exception, against presentation of an official identity card.

Goods intended for the inmates will be accepted by the remand prison only if they will not endanger the peace, order and security of the prison. In principle, only underwear, clothes, shoes, safety razors, books, wrist watches, jewellery, reading spectacles and cash are accepted.

Goods that are too large or prohibited may be rejected or returned at the expense of the sender. However, if the goods are expensive or quickly perishable, the sender may be asked to collect the goods within a reasonable period of time of not more than 14 days. After the expiry of the period or if the sender cannot be found, the goods may be either utilised, destroyed or stored with other movable property.

Special regulations apply to the acceptance of goods on the three working days before and after Easter, Christmas and birthdays.

The inmates will be informed of any receipt of goods which are not handed over to them.

The prison management decides on exceptions.
